What is a family Business?

Overview of Family Business

Did you know......

• 90% of U.S. businesses are categorized as family owned.

• 7 of America’s 8 oldest family businesses are farms.

• While 78% intend to pass the business on to children, only 34% create a succession plan (for 25% a will is the only element of that plan).

• 70% of first generation businesses fail to survive into the second generation.

• 15% survive into third generation.

• 1% survive into the fourth generation.
Overview of Family Business

Two things in life are certain – taxes & death

• Taxes we can deal with
• Few of us are prepared to pass on our companies after we depart this world
• Only one-third of family-owned businesses succeed in making the leap across generations
• Most are sold or wound up after the founder’s death
Overview of Family Business

Here’s a quick look at the variety of family businesses in our region.

- Hong Kong Chinese, Indonesian and Philippines family businesses face succession problems that are similar to other countries;

- In Indonesia, for example, ethnic Chinese form only about three to four per cent of the population but control nearly three-quarters of the country’s wealth;

- Chinese family businesses are headquartered throughout the Asia-Pacific region, but the heart of the network is Hong Kong, Singapore, Taiwan and the China coast. Ethnic Chinese are the major source of capital in Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia, Hong Kong, the Philippines, Vietnam and the China mainland.
Overview of Family Business

• Overseas Chinese account for 80 per cent of all investment coming into China itself. They share a common culture and hard work within a network of entrepreneurial relationships. Top positions are filled by family members with the head of family assuming overall command.

• Chinese family businesses in Singapore are economic assets that propel the modern Singaporean economy. But their hierarchical and patriarchal nature puts them at odds with the state’s Western attitudes. They have been transforming from family–ruled and managed to professionally managed family-rulled models as they react to the state and face increasing competition from Western corporations.

• In Thailand, family businesses have driven the industrialisation process. Before the Asian economic crisis in 1997, 220 family business groups produced two-thirds of the gross domestic product (GDP). But globalisation, social and political change and the financial crisis have seen the influence of Thailand’s business families greatly reduced.
Samples of Successful Global Family Businesses

- Toyota
- Cadbury
- Cargill
- Roche
- Walmart
- IKEA
- Samsung
- Mars
- LG
- BMW
- Hyundai
- Danone
As an example, Cargill and IKEA are two businesses that thrived given robust governance and ownership mechanisms – Case Studies of Successful Family Businesses

- Top management treated like family
- Groom management from within – current and previous CEOs had several decades of experience with the company ("Treat the business like a Family")
- Separation of family from business – no family involvement in business management since 1961
- Formalised family governance – clear ownership and decision rights among family members ("Treat the family like a business")

- Secured Ownership Structure
  - Family owns furniture business through a foundation;
  - This scheme maintains family ownership & protects family against liquidation
- Separation of family from Business
  - Although the family, through the foundation can appoint board members, it does not exercise direct management control over the furniture business
  - As a result, the company can attract and retain top talent to run, develop & grow the business
However, few family businesses survive to enjoy success due to the complex interaction among family, business and ownership.

80% of family businesses don’t survive the 3rd generation......

- Many successful international businesses have sprung from small family owned companies, e.g. Wal-Mart, Cargill, Tata, BMW, Roche, Michelin, Ford, etc.

- Yet, around 80% of family businesses fail to survive the 3rd generation

- As per the saying, “The 1st generation makes the money, 2nd generation tries to keep it, and the 3rd generation Loses it”

...due to business, family, & ownership issues

Business
- Failure to evolve the business-emotional attachment;
- Inability to successfully scale the business;
- Inadequate succession planning

Family
- No separation between family and business activities
- Family disputes among siblings

Ownership
- Lack of coordinated active ownership and corresponding governance
- Delay in clarifying ownership rights
In fact, many high profiles families overtime have been broken due to family rivalry, and ownership feuds – Family Risk factors for Family Disintegration

“No Separation Between Family and Business” – The Steinberg’s

- Founded one of the Canada’s successful supermarket chains in early 1940s
- Challenges
  - hiring policy putting the needs of the family first
  - Lack of robust family governance mechanisms
- Implications
  - Mismatch between people’s abilities & business requirements
  - Business exposed to family conflicts
- Widely publicised conflict led to the sale of the business in 1989

“Siblings Rivalry- The Dassler Brothers”

- Founded a successful shoe business in 1924
- Challenges
  - Ideological divide among brothers
  - Rivalry that extended beyond the brothers to the rest of the family
- Implications
  - Business split into Adidas (led by Adi) and Puma (Led by Rudi)
  - Despite the split, the brothers’ rivalry translated into fierce competition
- To the very end, families remained bitterly divided
In fact, many high-profile families overtime have been broken due to family rivalry, and ownership feuds – Family Risk factors for Family Disintegration

“Disputed Ownership Rights- The Pritzker’s”

• Developed a successful diversified conglomerate (owned Hyatt Hotels)

• Challenges
  - Put the business first and ignored family values
  - No mechanism for exit was defined

• Implications
  - Tensions broke between members not working in the business (outsiders) and ones that are in charge (insiders)

• Business dismantled with assets – rich/cash poor outsiders being flushed with liquidity
Challenges facing family businesses

- Family firms have unique problems
- Lack financial capability of larger firms
- Have less management expertise
- Have psychological toils and tribulations
Challenges Facing Family Business – Overlapping Systems (Business-Conflict-Family – Conflict-Ownership)
Examples of family business conflict

- How much should we pay family members?
  - Families typically reward based on need. In the business world people are paid based on market value

- How much equity ownership should family have and should it be given to outsiders?
  - In the real world employers provide incentives to key employees, by offering them an equity stake in its future
Why some family businesses are so successful?

- Family businesses not encumbered by demanding stockholders
- Family members are willing to sacrifice short-term profits for long-term gains
- Research shows that family members are more productive than other employees
- Family businesses preserve the humanity of the workplace
- They focus on the long-run
- They emphasise quality

Succession Planning - The next leader of your family business
Succession Planning

......it is a PROCESS that ensures the continuation of a business through the generations..

“The final test of greatness in a CEO is how well he chooses a successor and whether he can step aside and let his successor run the company.”

Peter Drucker, A Management Expert
Management succession

• Major problem is lack of preparation for passing managerial control to the next generation

• All an owner has to do is designate which heir will inherit the operation or, better yet, train one (or more) of them to take over the business during the founder’s lifetime

• Easier said than done

Succession Planning

..... “70% of all family businesses never make to the second generation

And 90% fail to reach the third”
Bottom line

• Yes, choosing an heir can be like buying a cemetery plot but . . .

• Owners who refuse to face the succession issue place an unnecessary burden on those whom they leave behind

Forcing events

- Death
- Illness or incapacity
- Mental or psychological breakdown
- Abrupt departure
- Legal problems
- Severe business decline
- Financial difficulties
The search for a successor

- Son, daughter, nephew or niece?
- Can founder and heir get along?
- Founder must be a coach and adviser
- Heir must respect the founder
- Heir must be able to initiate changes
- Founder often trains a team of (candidate) executive managers of family and non-family
- Founder hopes natural leader will emerge

Succession strategy: Context

• Time: The earlier, the better
• Type of venture: Difficult to replace ideas person or a person whose business contacts are key
• Capabilities needed: Do you need an engineer or a marketer?
• Entrepreneur’s vision: A successor, it is hoped, will share this vision
• Environmental factors: Sometimes change is needed at the top
Elements of the succession plan

• Identify a successor
  – As difficult as it is, every owner-manager should identify a successor or at least the characteristics and experience needed of such an individual

• Groom an heir
  – Precious time is lost unless a successor is openly groomed

• Agree on a plan
  – Effective succession requires a plan of how responsibilities are transferred

• Consider outside help
  – Promotion from within is a morale-building philosophy. Sometimes it is a mistake
Steps in Succession Planning Process

1. Understand what succession is
2. Discover expectations
3. Examine options
4. Create a plan
5. Check with experts
6. Finalise the plan
7. Implement the plan
Step 1. What Succession Is and Is Not

Succession is:
- A process
- About family, people and relationships
- About ownership, management and estate
- About what is fair
- Driven by the family values, wants and concerns

Succession is not:
- An event
- One person’s problem
- About minimizing taxes
- About equity
- Driven by technical issues that are handled by lawyers, accountants, etc.
Step 2: Discovering Expectations

• Should involve all family member (whether in the business or not)
• Assumptions at any stage about other’s wants or expectations should not be made
• Say no to secrecy!
Say NO to Secrecy!

Perry

Rose

Kay

Perry. Jr
Say NO to Secrecy!

- Perry and Rose built a successful farming operation.
- Their child Perry Jr. was interested in inheriting and operating the farm. His sister Kay was a school teacher and was never involved in the farm.
- The parents were concerned that the two children would have great difficulty getting along with each other if the farm was left to the two of them outright.
- Perry and Rose decided that the best way to deal with the situation was to pass the ownership of the farm to their grandchildren by placing the farm in a trust.
- The farm was to be managed by Perry Jr. according to a detailed management plan in the trust document.
- They never involved Kay and Perry Jr. in the planning process. In fact, they intended to keep their succession plan a secret until Perry’s death.
But, as so often happens in families that are close personally, the secret slipped out. Perry Jr. was absolutely furious and felt betrayed by his parents.

Surely they did not trust him to bypass him with the farmland in this manner after he had spent so many years working the farm alongside Dad. He felt he deserved his shot at owning the farm.

The parents had a good plan, but to spring it on the children after you are dead is never a good idea. All parties would have been so much better off if the children had some input in planning process, had time to digest the advantages of the plan, and had time to possibly even buy into the plan in terms of wholeheartedly endorsing it.
Step 3: Examine Options

Key Questions:
• What role, if any, will family members play in the succession plan?
• What can we do to treat all offspring fairly?
• How can I prepare for either a different role in the business or for retirement?
• How will the transfer of ownership be handled?
• How will the successor(s) be trained?
• How will the change in roles be communicated to stakeholders?

Step 4: Create a Succession Plan

- Plan for transferring management
- Plan for transferring property
- Contingency plan for managing disruptive events
Choosing the Successor

What specific attributes would you look for in a successor?

- Education
- Experience
- Personal characteristics
- Skills required
- Job responsibilities
Grooming the Successor

How do you provide opportunities to make decisions, take risks, and develop management skills?

- Initial evaluation
- Management training
- Career growth
- Regular feedback
- Timetable (allow 5 years to 15 years)
Step 5: Check with Experts

• Use them to comment on your thinking, not to do your thinking for you;

• Should be visited only after you’ve thought about the process
Step 6: Finalize the Plan

• Write it down!
Step 7: Implement Plan

- How to announce the plan?
- Develop program with action plans
- Set target dates
- Schedule follow up/review of program
- Keep everyone informed
- Review the plan periodically
Succession Planning

Critical Issues:

• Transfer of management
• Transfer of assets
• Anticipating disruptive events
How to actually go about addressing these issues and persuading the family to do so?

- Use of 12 factor matrix
- A formal fixed price assignment
  - Information gathering
  - Confidential one to one interviews
  - Development of proposals
  - Testing of proposals
  - Family meeting
  - Set of agreed actions
- Implementation separately thereafter
What is the 12 factor matrix?

- A methodology that helps the family
  - identify their issues
  - Treats the business like a business
  - Treats the family like a family
  - plan for the future
  - work together to develop the appropriate strategies for the family and the business
  - provide an opportunity to explore the views of all the family members
What is the 12 factor matrix?

• Then to manage their challenges by developing – communication between individuals
  – succession planning and transition from one generation to the next – plans for the future
  – dealing with conflict
  – retirement planning
  – Considers and balances the impact of the business on all the stakeholders
The 12 factor matrix

- Succession planning
- Remuneration planning
- Equity ownership by family members
